WILLIAM ALDRICH has written about gardening since 1980, mostly for the Chicago Tribune. He is an award-winning author of more than 200 articles and is a past president of the Garden Writers Association. A lifelong resident of the Chicago area, he founded Chicagoland Gardening Magazine in 1995 and remains its publisher. DON WILLIAMSON, the author or coauthor of more than a dozen popular gardening guides, has a degree in horticultural technology and professional certificates in turf management. He has extensive experience designing and constructing both perennial and annual beds in formal landscape settings.

Best, hands down, author for midwest gardening. My go to author for sure. Have all his books, and I do have the most beautiful gardens in my neighborhood.

We live in the Chicago area and this book was a huge help when, after losing three thirty year old pine trees, we needed to purchase new trees for our yard. In the past I have not always found the nursery people very helpful. Mistakes can be very costly in terms of money and labor. I actually brought this book with me and I felt much more confident in my purchases. I will never again go to a nursery to purchase trees or shrubs without it.

GREAT BOOK AND FAST SHIPPER

This easy to read book is geographically specific. It gives the beginning gardener a chance to schedule each month in the garden. I would have liked some more actual instructional information but I will recommend this book good resource to start your landscaping project. great way to find out which trees and shrubs are best situated in what part of your property.

The book is good but it took over a week to get it.

I checked this book out of the library originally to assist in choosing a tree to plant in our new front yard. I loved it so much that I went in search of it the next year when we decided to plant a few shrubs in our front yard and a tree in our back. It is very helpful for any amateur gardener that is unfamiliar with what is found in the local nursery. Pair this book with the Morton Arboretum site and you'll be guaranteed to know what you are getting yourself into when it comes to enhancing your property!
